DID YOU
KNOW

LPG is an energy-rich fuel source with a higher calorific value per unit than other commonly used fuels, including coal, natural gas, diesel, petrol, fuel oils, and biomass derived alcohols. This fact means that an LPG flame burns hotter, an advantage that can translate into higher efficiency.

LPG is extremely versatile and portable. It can be transported using sea, rail or road transport. LPG is available in a wide variety of packaging and storage options ranging from refillable cylinders to underground tanks.

INSTANTANEOUS WATER HEATING

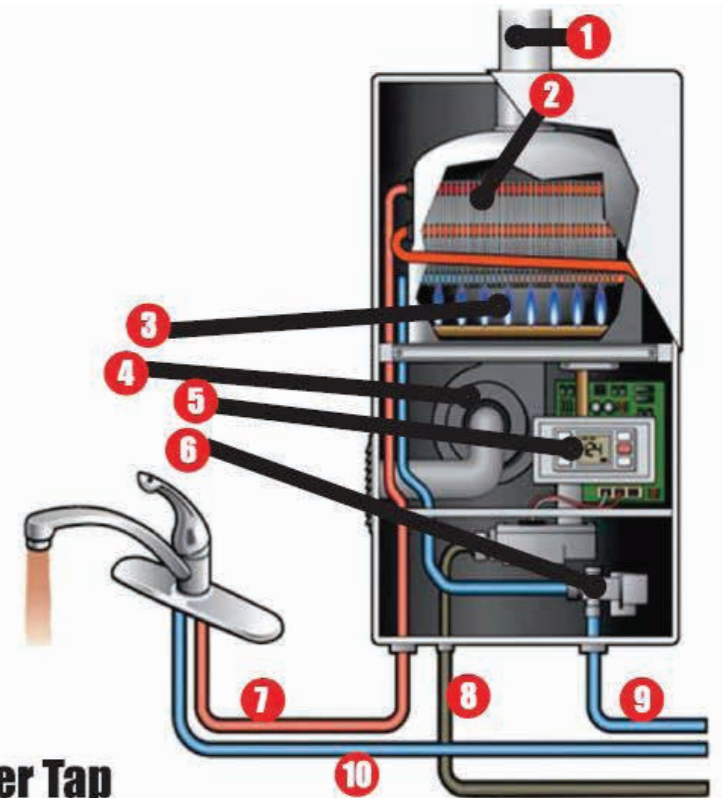

Gas water heaters do not store hot water in bulk which has to be maintained if the water is not being used. The cold water heats up as required, it does this by passing through a heat exchanger where the heat from the gas burner is transferred to the water which then exits the heater via the hot water taps or shower head.

INSTRUCTIONS

HOW IT WORKS

1. Flue
2. Heat Exchanger
3. Burners
4. Flue Fan
5. Control Panel
6. Water Valve
7. Hot Water Outlet Pipe
8. Gas Supply Pipe
9. Cold Water Inlet Pipe
10. Cold Water Pipe to Mixer Tap

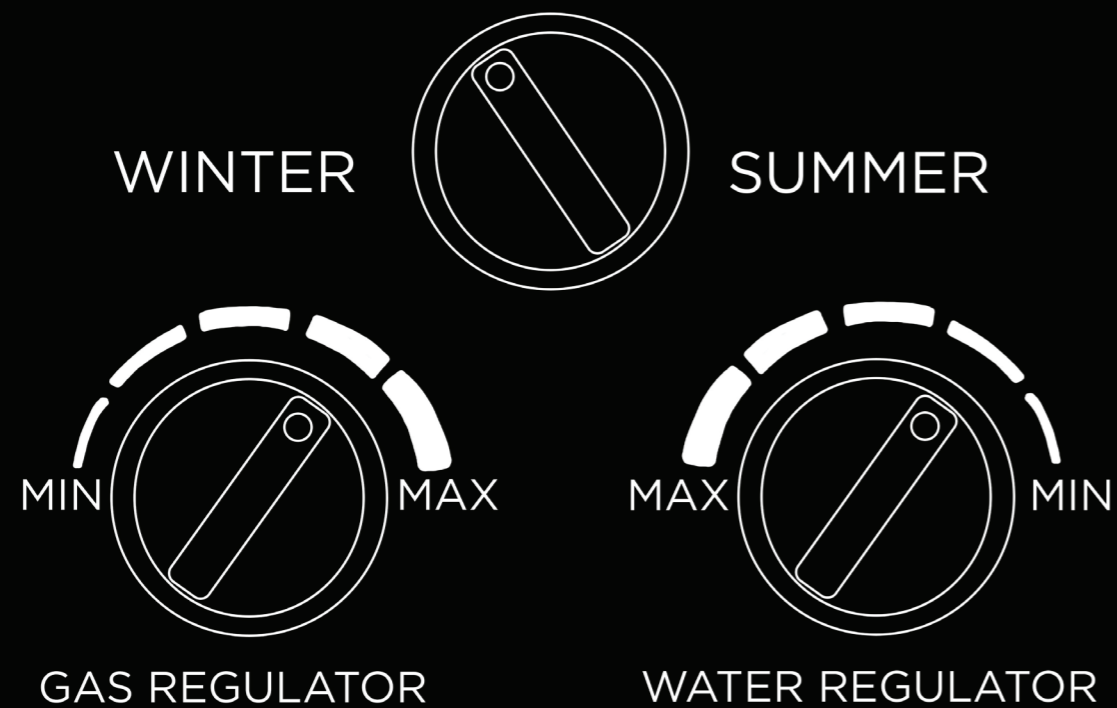

Choosing The Size of the Unit

Usage	Require	5lt	10lt	12lt	16lt	20lt
Hand Basin	5lt-10lt P/Min	X	X	X	X	X
Kitchen	5lt-10lt P/Min	X	X	X	X	X
Shower	10lt-12lt P/Min		X	X	X	X
Bath	12lt-20lt P/Min			X	X	X

* Works best off a 3-4kg/hr regulator

GEYSER CONTROLS

SUMMER/ WINTER CONTROL KNOB

When in summer mode the burner output is reduced as the ambient cold water temperature is higher than it is in the winter when maximum burner output is required.

GAS CONTROL KNOB

Use to increase or decrease the flame intensity of the burners. The higher the flame intensity the hotter the water for any given flow as governed by the setting of the hot water tap or mixer tap setting.

WATER FLOW CONTROL KNOB

Used to set the maximum hot water flow that the water heater will produce. For a typical multi outlet installation it is best to set this to maximum and adjust the required hot water flow by adjusting the flow settings on the hot water taps or mixer taps to the required level.

NOTE: The temperature display panel is only to display the temperature of the hot water produced by the water heater. It is not a control device.

DID YOU KNOW?

REGULATOR:

A 4 kg mounted inline regulator that complies with SANS 1237.

It is connected to the cylinder(s) by means of;

- a) a single pigtail hose which connects directly to the cylinder, or
- b) a changeover valve with two pigtail hoses each connecting to a different cylinder. The changeover valve takes gas from one cylinder with the other cylinder as a back up. When the cylinder in use runs out of gas, it is a simple matter to move the lever on the changeover valve to draw gas from the other cylinder

Both a) and b) options form a part of the installation and are the responsibility on the installer.

CYLINDER SIZES

For the 5 litre and 10 litre models the gas supply will require at least 1 x 19 kg LPG cylinder for efficient performance. It is however preferable if extended usage is required to install 1 x 48 kg LPG cylinder. For the 12 litre, 16 litre and 20 litre models the gas supply will require at least 1 x 48 kg LPG cylinder for efficient performance. For colder climates it is preferable to use 2x 48 kg cylinders both connected at the same time.
